

Climate change in Andean cosmivision: An indigenous perspective on the transformative power of worldview

Kristine Skarbø, Kristin VanderMolen and Rosa Ramos

Perspectives on climate change

“And so they said, my grandparents, that one day you will lose the whole glacier, and with the glacier the grain production will be lost too. And now I see that this belief has turned reality, because my grandparents said so, and exactly the same is happening. “

Patricia Sánchez

The transformative power of worldview

“Nowadays nobody believes in Pacha mama. Now we are like dogs without owners. We do what we please. Oh, to tell these things to the young – who will believe? Earlier one believed, but not anymore. If it rains, it rains, if the sun shines, it shines.”

Mercedes Morales